immie Collin's Champions Won the Initial Game of the Series from Clark Griffith's Team by Score of 5 to 2.

AMERICAN GROUNDS, BOSTON, May 6-Chick Stahl's tremendous hitting was the principal factor in carrying the the five runs of the home team, his triple in the first inning sending Collins across the rubber, and his home run in the fifth, the first made on these grounds this year, sending Tanna nill and Collins over the rubber ahend

New York was never in the hunt after this. In the first part of the game they hit Tannehill readily. Although they made three hits in the second inning they got but one run. In the last fou nnings but four hits were made off Tannehill and in the last inning the side vas retired in order. Boston played a very strong game in the field and did not make a fielding error, while New York's only error was made in the fourth inning, costing a run. Keeler's stick work was best for the visitors.

Hughes's friends were out in numbers, and when he came to the bat in the third inning they presented him with an elegant solid gold watch, chain and charm. The weather was delightful and the attendance very large and enthusiastic.

imate friend, Mrs. George A. Matthews of North Dana, Mass., just before she killed herself. Beautiful, rich, author of two novels and an accomplished musician, there didn't seem be anything in life for her to live for, and she shot herself in the early morn ing after a night of reflection over situation, intensified to her, by some words she and her husband had had during the evening.

Full of Sentiment and Emotion To the intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Cruikshank it was known that their married life was not of the happiest. Mrs. Cruikshank was a woma full of sentiment and emotion: Mr Cruikshank is a steady, unsentimenta ousiness man. The couple never had any children and in the ten years of repeatedly gone to her mother's home in Philadelphia, remaining there sometimes for weeks. There never has been any open rupture between the couple, but ir their own home they have always occupied separate apartments and have had little in common.

Mrs. Cruikshank was a Miss Mary rominent socially in Philadelphia.

the first intimation that anything was wrong coming when the Walker girl knocked at her mistress's door at 8 c'clock and, getting no answer, entered the room herself.

Mrs. Cruikshank was not around. The bed was undisturbed. The maid went to Mr. Cruikshank's room, roused and old him that she didn't know what had become of his wife. Mr. Cruikshank hastily dressed and went to the rear room. In less than a minute he saw the bare foot of his wife protruding from under one of the couches. Hastily moving the couch aside he found the dead body of Mrs. Cruikshank, blood trickling from a tiny wound in the left breast and a revolver clasped in her

Cruikshank rushed from the room as oused a friend, Charles B. Best, who was sleeping in another part of the house. He asked him to get a doctor is movement appears to mark the beginning of the end of Port Arthur. With the railroad in their hands the Japanese can cut off rein forcements from the north and attack Port Arthur with overwhelmin force on the land side. It is not believed that the Russian stronghold can stand a great while against a combined land and sea attack.

LONDON, May 6.-Port Arthur is cut off from railroad commun cation with the Russian been A Japanese army has been landed at Port Adams on the west side of Liaotung Poninsula, close to the railroad. This army is only twenty mile distant from the Japanese force which was landed yesterday at Pitsewo, on the east side of the peninsula.

It is reported that the Japanese have landed an army of 60,000 men under Gen. Oku at Pitsewo, a settlement on the east side of the Liaotung peninsula, eighty miles northeast of Port Arthur. The peninsula at this point is narrow and 60,000 men should have no difficulty in intrenching themselves across it and cutting the railroad.

Admiral Alexieff and Grand Duke Boris have left Post Arthur for fukden. St. Petersburg says that the Admiral and the Grand Duke Boris were ordered out of Port Arthur to join the main body of troops, but the prevalent impression is that they left to avoid being captured.

Admiral Togo's fleet is outside Port Arthur and despite ssian sources it is quite certain that the Russian fleet is bottled up. The Japanese plan of campaign undoubtedly provides for a simultan Coroner Scholer was notified of the suicide and he went to the house and took charge of things. He found that before killing herself Mrs. Cruikshank had fastened a small rosary around her left wrist. She had evidently crawled under the couch before shooting herself in order to prevent the report of the revolver from being heard. Letters She Left.

Among the letters that the woman had written was one for her husband, in which she said that her married life was not happy, as there was no love in it. She mentioned some business matters she wanted settled and ended it with a simple "Good-by." The letter to Mrs. Matthews went further into details about her unhappy life. The other letters the Coroner refused to make public.

In her left hand the dead woman clasped a newspaper clipping referring to the suicide of a Miss Edith Southerland, of No. 1721 Twentieth street, Philadelphia. She had underlined these lines of a letter which the Southerland girl left when she killed herself: "It is the old story of a woman raised in luxury forced to work." The application of this is not clear, as Mrs. Cruikshank and her husband were both wealthy. Among the letters that the woman had
